EXPLANATIONS

1. The fact that a birth, marriage, or death is recorded in Conway does not prove that it occurred there, unless it is so stated in the record. When places other than Conway and Massachusetts are named in the original records they are given as they appear there; but when Conway is named, the initial letter only is used, except in unusual phrases.

2. In all items from town records the original spelling is followed, and no attempt is made to correct errors appearing in the records.

3. A baptism is not printed, if it occurs within one year after the recorded date of birth of a child of the same name and parents or if it is clear that the child baptized is identical with the child of the birth record; but variations found in the baptismal record are added to the birth record.

4. The birth of a married woman is recorded under her maiden name, if it is known. But if the maiden name cannot be determined, the entry appears under the husband's name, with a dash enclosed in brackets, i.e., [-----], to signify that the maiden name is unknown. If it is not known whether the surname is that of a married or unmarried woman, "? m." is placed in brackets after the Christian name.

5. Marriages and intentions of marriage are printed in full under the names of the men. The names of the women are used in general only as cross references. When both the marriage and intention of marriage are recorded, only the marriage record is printed with exceptions explained below; and where a marriage appears without the intention being recorded, it is designated with an asterisk.

Marriages marked with a † are recorded in the "Town Copy," pages 391-392, under the caption, "A Record of Marriages Supposed to have been performed by Rev. John Emerson at the dates indicated in the margin." The marginal dates are the same as the first dates of corresponding intentions which appear as follows: "June 29th 1792 Marriage is intended . . . 20th July 1792 the above has been Published".

6. Additional information which does not appear in the original text of an item, i.e., any explanation, query, inference, or difference shown in other entries of the record, is bracketed. Parentheses are used to show variations in the spelling of a name in the same entry, to indicate the maiden name of a wife, to enclose an imperfect portion of the original text, and to separate clauses in the original text.

The first part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the various methods which have been proposed for the determination of the rate of reaction between a radical and a molecule. The most common of these is the method of initial rates, in which the initial rate of reaction is measured for a series of different concentrations of the reactants. This method is simple and direct, but it is subject to a number of errors, particularly those arising from the determination of the initial rate. A more accurate method is the method of integrated rate laws, in which the integrated rate law for the reaction is used to determine the rate constant. This method is more complicated, but it is more accurate and it is less subject to errors. The third method is the method of half-lives, in which the half-life of the reaction is determined. This method is also simple and direct, but it is subject to errors, particularly those arising from the determination of the half-life. The fourth method is the method of steady-state concentrations, in which the steady-state concentration of the radical is determined. This method is also simple and direct, but it is subject to errors, particularly those arising from the determination of the steady-state concentration. The fifth method is the method of temperature dependence, in which the rate constant is determined for a series of different temperatures. This method is also simple and direct, but it is subject to errors, particularly those arising from the determination of the rate constant. The sixth method is the method of activation energy, in which the activation energy of the reaction is determined. This method is also simple and direct, but it is subject to errors, particularly those arising from the determination of the activation energy. The seventh method is the method of kinetic isotope effects, in which the rate constant is determined for a series of different isotopes of the reactants. This method is also simple and direct, but it is subject to errors, particularly those arising from the determination of the rate constant. The eighth method is the method of laser spectroscopy, in which the rate constant is determined by measuring the rate of change of the concentration of the radical. This method is also simple and direct, but it is subject to errors, particularly those arising from the determination of the rate of change of the concentration of the radical. The ninth method is the method of electron spin resonance, in which the rate constant is determined by measuring the rate of change of the magnetic field. This method is also simple and direct, but it is subject to errors, particularly those arising from the determination of the rate of change of the magnetic field. The tenth method is the method of mass spectrometry, in which the rate constant is determined by measuring the rate of change of the mass of the radical. This method is
 those arising from the determination of the rate of change of the mass of the radical.

† See Explanations No. 5.

1. The first of these is the fact that the system is not self-sufficient. It is dependent on the external world for its raw materials and for its energy. This is a serious disadvantage, especially in the case of a small country like Iceland, which has no access to the sea and no other natural resources.
2. The second disadvantage is that the system is not very flexible. It is based on a fixed set of assumptions, and it is not easy to change these assumptions if they turn out to be wrong. This is a serious disadvantage, especially in the case of a small country like Iceland, which has no access to the sea and no other natural resources.
3. The third disadvantage is that the system is not very efficient. It is based on a fixed set of assumptions, and it is not easy to change these assumptions if they turn out to be wrong. This is a serious disadvantage, especially in the case of a small country like Iceland, which has no access to the sea and no other natural resources.
4. The fourth disadvantage is that the system is not very reliable. It is based on a fixed set of assumptions, and it is not easy to change these assumptions if they turn out to be wrong. This is a serious disadvantage, especially in the case of a small country like Iceland, which has no access to the sea and no other natural resources.
5. The fifth disadvantage is that the system is not very secure. It is based on a fixed set of assumptions, and it is not easy to change these assumptions if they turn out to be wrong. This is a serious disadvantage, especially in the case of a small country like Iceland, which has no access to the sea and no other natural resources.
6. The sixth disadvantage is that the system is not very adaptable. It is based on a fixed set of assumptions, and it is not easy to change these assumptions if they turn out to be wrong. This is a serious disadvantage, especially in the case of a small country like Iceland, which has no access to the sea and no other natural resources.
7. The seventh disadvantage is that the system is not very innovative. It is based on a fixed set of assumptions, and it is not easy to change these assumptions if they turn out to be wrong. This is a serious disadvantage, especially in the case of a small country like Iceland, which has no access to the sea and no other natural resources.
8. The eighth disadvantage is that the system is not very competitive. It is based on a fixed set of assumptions, and it is not easy to change these assumptions if they turn out to be wrong. This is a serious disadvantage, especially in the case of a small country like Iceland, which has no access to the sea and no other natural resources.
9. The ninth disadvantage is that the system is not very sustainable. It is based on a fixed set of assumptions, and it is not easy to change these assumptions if they turn out to be wrong. This is a serious disadvantage, especially in the case of a small country like Iceland, which has no access to the sea and no other natural resources.
10. The tenth disadvantage is that the system is not very resilient. It is based on a fixed set of assumptions, and it is not easy to change these assumptions if they turn out to be wrong. This is a serious disadvantage, especially in the case of a small country like Iceland, which has no access to the sea and no other natural resources.
